DID YOU KNOW...

Borosilicate glass is a type of glass that has high resistance to sudden changes in temperature, the so-called thermal shocks. In practice, this means that dishes and utensils made of borosilicate glass will not break if you pour boiling water into them, or when you move the vessel from high to low temperature. The thermal resistance of borosilicate glass makes it widely used in laboratories, restaurants and ... wine bars.

Color-changing water bottle

DID YOU KNOW...

A glass of cold water may be a healthy alternative to coffee. It does not rinse out magnesium from your body, and in return it effectively hydrates and refreshes it. A slight dehydration of the body is enough for you to start losing concentration. By adding fruit or vegetables to plain water, you will improve its taste and make it more refreshing at the same time. PRO TIP: Water with citrus fruits or cucumbers will take on flavor in just 30 minutes, and harder fruits, such as melon or pineapple, only after about two hours.

SUSHI LOVERS

DID YOU KNOW...

Sushi is most often served with soy sauce, green wasabi horseradish and pink ginger. Interestingly, there is really only one species of ginger that is naturally yellow! The pink color in this dish is the result of pickling. Ginger is eaten to clear the taste buds between different types of sushi.
